Transforming Rural Communities in Sierra Leone

Mission statement

EnviroOne is a non-profit organization that partners with rural communities in Sierra Leone to break cycles of poverty through regenerative agriculture, clean water, and education. Our integrated model helps families move from crisis to resilience.

Why Sierra Leone?

Sierra Leone is among the countries with the highest rural poverty and lowest access to safe water in Africa. Many families rely on rain-fed agriculture, walk long distances to collect unsafe water, and have limited access to education and health services. By focusing on a few key regions and working hand-in-hand with local leaders, EnviroOne helps villages build lasting solutions that restore land, improve health, and expand opportunities for children, women, and youth.

Our Three Pillars.

1. Regenerative Agriculture

- Trains farmers in climate-smart, soil-restoring practices.
- Provides seeds, tools, and ongoing support for community plots.
- Helps families achieve higher yields, stable incomes, and better nutrition.

2. Clean Water

- Drills and rehabilitates wells in rural villages.
- Provides hygiene and maintenance training so systems last.
- Reduces waterborne disease and frees women and girls from long walks for water.

3. Education & Skills

- Keeps children in school by reducing time spent fetching water.
- Offers practical skills and training for youth and women.
- Builds local leadership to sustain progress over the long term.

Impact at a Glance

- 30+ water wells built and rehabilitated
- 105,000+ people reached with access to safe water
- 20+ hectares under regenerative agriculture practices
- 500+ farmers supported with seeds, tools, and training
- 3+ chiefdoms and regions served in Sierra Leone
- Hundreds of youth and women engaged in skills and leadership activities

A Story from the Field

“Before the well, my children were often sick from the water, and they missed school to help fetch it. Now we have clean water near our home. My children are healthier, and I have more time to work on my farm.”
